Mental illness is growing into a bigger crisis as we continue to live in the time of COVID-19. In late June 2020, one in four young adults and nearly 11% of adults reported contemplating suicide over the last month. The best way to find these individuals is through their PCP.

Magellan has created a website that provides behavioral health information for PCPs to use to evaluate, treat and refer patients to help them get the care they need. MagellanPCPtoolkit.com offers:

- Diagnostic screening tools to help providers quickly and easily identify patients’ behavioral health risks for anxiety, bipolar disorder, depression, drug and alcohol abuse, and post-traumatic stress disorder.
- Community Resourcefinder to assist providers in recommending local services that can support their patients through life stages, including housing, adoption, infant and childcare, education, senior care, home care and special needs.
- Clinical practice guidelines from Magellan and the American Psychiatric Association that promote evidence-based practices and positive outcomes.
- Magellan webinars to help providers learn more about HEDIS quality measures for mental health and substance use disorder screening and treatment, and what the measures mean for their practices.
- Patient handouts on a variety of topics that providers can share to educate patients and help them make informed health decisions.

MagellanPCPtoolkit.com helps providers to efficiently address behavioral health conditions and provide whole-person care for their patients. Visit MagellanPCPtoolkit.com to learn more.
